The Immigration Question

The United States is a nation founded by immigrants. The poem at the base of the Statue of Liberty, that was dedicated only a few years ago, states that this country is a refuge for those teeming masses that yearn to breathe free. Yet now we are facing a wave of immigrants that is unprecedented in our history. Can we afford to allow our gates to be open without some kind of restriction on the discarded masses from other countries?

Immigration has long been a contentious issue in American politics. Before the Civil War, some native-born Americans feared Irish Catholic immigration would undermine democracy and Protestantism, and such fears still lurk today. For example, some whites have joined the American Protective Association in the 1890s. New anxieties have now arisen about immigrants from Southern and Eastern Europe, including Italians, Poles, Hungarians, and Russian Jews. Most whites also see Asian immigrants as even more unassimilable, and far more racially different, than Europeans. Chinese immigration had been a hot-button issue in presidential campaigns of the 1880s; after passage of the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882, renewed in 1892, anti-Chinese agitation has continued on the West Coast but to a lesser degree. Nativist fears are rising again, as thousands of immigrants pack the Eastern cities and as Japanese, along with Chinese, immigrants, arrive on the West Coast. Look closely at the chart below to see the sources of recent immigration.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS.

The Tribune Almanac (New York Tribune, 1897)

Italy: 68,060
Russia: 45,137
Ireland: 39,908
Germany: 31,885
Austria: 31,496
Hungary: 30,898
Sweden: 21,177
England: 19,691
Norway: 8,855
Finland: 6,308
Cuba: 6,077

Total Immigration: 343,267

Many contend that these recent immigrants are necessary to provide the labor that fuels the tremendous industrial growth of the last decade. The Republican Party and big business have been especially vocal in their support of this influx of cheap labor. Critics have blamed recent immigrants for causing crime, being "un-American" in their language, religion, and family lives, and for concentrating in cities where their votes are controlled by machines--a circumstance unavoidable for many immigrants who have faced residential segregation and dire poverty. In the mainstream press socialism, communism, and anarchism have been widely depicted as "alien" political beliefs brought over from foreign soil. Labor organizers have argued that large influxes of new workers undermine wages. Labor unions have also complained that these foreigners are taking jobs away from native-born workers. Are these people a threat to the culture of democracy, free enterprise, and Christianity that has made this country what it is today?

What can be done to allay the fears of the American people?

It is widely accepted that the government should have the power to exclude four inadmissible classes: anarchists, people with epilepsy, beggars, and importers of prostitutes. But should new laws go even further? Should the government have the power to exclude specific nationality groups? Since the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act this has been done. Should this now be done to certain European nationalities? If so, how do we decide which nationalities to exclude? One suggestion has been the implementation of a quota system. Certain quotas would be established for each country based on the percentage of the US population that is made up of that nationality at this time. If, for instance, 40% of the US population is German then 40% of all immigrants admitted next year would have to be from Germany. The advantages of this system is that industrialist would still have a source of cheap labor and yet the United States would be able to maintain the ethnic balance that we currently have and preserve the American culture we all covet.

A Trip to Columbus

More and more villagers are making the trip into Columbus to experience the sights and sounds of this rapidly growing urban area. At the time of the Civil War, Columbus had a population of less than 20,000. By 1880 its population was a little more than 50,000, and now it can boast of more than 120,000 souls. Industry is growing still, but most factories are relocating to the outer edges of the town. The wealthy residents are now moving out to the areas surrounding Ohio State University, Capital University, and the new district of Grandview. The old city, commonly referred to as Flytown, is the home to many small shops and stores and over 400 saloons. The exception to this is the area around what is known as capital square. This area is dominated by office buildings and hotels. Three of the finest hotels in the state are located here. These are the Deshler, the Neil House, and the Chittenden. The residential floors of these hotels have housed several of the state's dignitaries such as past-governor and now President William McKinley and current governor Asa Bushnell. Excellent stage entertainment can be had at the newly constructed Southern Theater. Columbus definitely does not have a shortage of good theaters, but this is probably the best. Smith's European Hotel is the home to the notable New York Oyster House and is located across from the capital building at the corner of Broad and High streets. Just west of there is the first steel skyscraper in Columbus, the Wyandotte Building. It is an awe-inspiring eleven stories tall and is a perfect example of the Chicago skyscraper school of architecture. A little further to the west, at the edge of the downtown area is another structure that will catch the eye. This is the Toledo & Ohio Central railroad depot. Its tower and oriental architecture makes it a sight to behold. At night, the "City of Arches" comes alive with the brightness of its many illuminated arches. Electric lights powered by the newly built Municipal Light and Power House light the arches as they span the streets below. It is a dazzling sight to see. During the daylight hours, one of the most entertaining places to visit in the city is the newly opened Olentangy Park. The park features a roller coaster that amuses and terrifies its passengers on a rail track that carries them over twists and turns and ups and downs at a speed of over 35 miles per hour. If that is not to one's liking, then there are also many less strenuous activities as well as stage shows for your enjoyment. For those wishing to experience Columbus for themselves, getting there is not a problem. With the implementation of the new inter-urban rail lines connecting outlying towns such as Worthington and Westerville to Columbus it is a relatively quick trip into the big city. These "traction lines", as they are called, can now get you to Columbus in a fraction of the time it used to take.

Once you are there, one can use either the horse-powered or electric powered trolleys to navigate the streets of Columbus. Travel is inexpensive too, as it costs only 25 cents for eight people to travel anywhere on the trolley.

Lynching on the Rise

by Mary R. Taylor

Frazier Baker, a black man, had been appointed postmaster of Lake City, South Carolina in 1897, but local whites objected and had undertaken a campaign to force his removal. When these efforts failed to dislodge Baker, a mob attacked him and his family at night at their house, which also served as the post office. He and his infant daughter, Julia Baker, died at his house after being fatally shot during a white mob attack on February 22, 1898.

This kind of happening is occurring more and more often. Lynching is on the rise in America. Lynching is the practice whereby a mob--usually several dozen or several hundred persons--takes the law into its own hands in order to injure and kill a person usually accused of some wrongdoing. The alleged offense can range from a serious crime like theft or murder to a mere violation of local customs and sensibilities. The issue of the victim's guilt is usually secondary, since the mob serves as prosecutor, judge, jury, and executioner. Due process yields to momentary passions and expedient objectives. From 1890 to the present, an average of 175 Negroes have been lynched each year. Why must the cost of freedom be paid in blood? What can be done to stop this senseless violence against our fellow Americans? I encourage my fellow villagers to show their support for the anti-lynching movement by signing my petition. Please visit the Taylor House for more information.

TENT PERFORMANCE

The Dog and Pony Show

The World's Greatest Dog and Pony Show continues to delight large crowds with its entertaining performance. The tent at the corner of Buttles avenue and High street in Columbus is the scene at each performance of hilarious enthusiasm, as the people watch the clever animals in their almost human tricks. Dogs, ponies, and monkeys all do their share toward furnishing the best entertainment, and all succeed in showing themselves possessed of unusual intelligence. The wonder is how their trainer could ever teach them some of the tricks. In the common expression, it must have taken a world of patience and an unlimited amount of knowledge of animal characteristics. There was a special matinee performance of the show Friday afternoon, and there will be another Saturday afternoon. Performances are given every evening.

MINERVA PARK The Casino

For one thing in particular, the test crowds at Minerva park this week and last have found reason to commend the company that owns the casino. There is always an abundance of rail cars after a performance, supplying seats for everyone, and that without disagreeable waits. This takes away the possibility of what might be a considerable annoyance, and makes the ride home as pleasant as the journey to the park. In the casino this week the visitor will find a bill that possesses three very good numbers, and others that are fair. There might be more variety to the performance as it runs this week, but in some ways it is both strong and novel. Matinees are given each day, rain or shine, and a performance every night.

Juneteenth?

This Sunday there will be several events and a Jubilee Day Parade on the village square. This celebration is known as Juneteenth.

Juneteenth, also known as Jubilee Day, Emancipation Day, Freedom Day, and Black Independence Day commemorates the emancipation of slaves in the United States. Originating in Galveston, Texas, it has been celebrated annually on June 19th in various parts of the Southern United States since 1866. Juneteenth's commemoration is on the anniversary date of the June 19, 1865 announcement of General Order No. 3 by Union Army general Gordon Granger proclaiming freedom for enslaved people in Texas, which was the last state of the Confederacy with institutional slavery.

President Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, issued on January 1, 1863, had freed the enslaved people in Texas and all the other Southern secessionist states of the Confederacy except for parts of states not in rebellion. Enforcement of the Proclamation generally relied upon the advance of Union troops. Texas, as the most remote state of the former Confederacy, had seen an expansion of slavery and had a low presence of Union troops as the American Civil War ended; thus, enforcement there had been slow and inconsistent prior to Granger's announcement. Just two months after the surrender of Robert E. Lee and the eventual conclusion of the Civil War, General Gordon Granger arrived in Galveston, Texas to announce that the Emancipation Proclamation was in full effect and slavery had been abolished in the US. For decades, white Americans celebrated their independence from Britain's colonial and economic tyranny. On June 19, 1865, Black Americans got to celebrate theirs when Granger arrived. However, he was a few years late. The Emancipation Proclamation that enlisted over 200,000 formerly enslaved Black men to fight in the Civil War had already taken effect over two and a half years prior. For a short while after the fall of the Confederacy, slavery remained legal in two of the Union border states – Delaware and Kentucky. Those enslaved people were freed with the ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which abolished chattel slavery nationwide on December 6, 1865. The last enslaved people present in the continental United States were freed when the enslaved people held in the Indian Territories that had sided with the Confederacy were released, namely the Choctaw, in 1866. In 1866, on June 19, the first official Juneteenth celebrations took place in Texas. The original observances included prayer meetings and the singing of spirituals, and celebrants wore new clothes as a way of representing their newfound freedom. Within a few years, ex-slaves in other southern states were celebrating the day as well, making it an annual tradition. Celebratory traditions often include public readings of the Emancipation Proclamation, singing traditional songs such as "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Lift Every Voice and Sing". Some Juneteenth celebrations also include rodeos, street fairs, family reunions, park parties, and historical reenactments.

As these traditions spread northward, we in the village are sure to see some of these celebrations.

Columbus—The Reverend T.R. Jenkins was genuinely surprised last Thursday night when returning to his residence at Trinity House. Upon returning early in the evening he discovered a score or more of the choir boys lined up against the wall outside the premises. He was immediately surrounded by the boys who presented him with a handsome bicycle lamp. Rev. Jenkins was completely surprised and immensely pleased. The occasion for the presentation of the gift was the recent retirement of the good Reverend from his position as the assistant minister at the Trinity Church.

Columbus—Information has been received in this city of the death of Mrs. Charlotte Hunt of South Omaha, Nebraska. She died of old age. The remains will be brought to Columbus. Mrs. Hunt was born in Green County, Pennsylvania in 1809. She with her husband moved to Center Village, Ohio in 1830. While there she reared seven children, of which three are dead and four remain living. It is said that she would always doeth good by lending a helping hand.
