Decoration Day Ceremony

On May 30th everyone gathered at the church cemetery, as has been the custom for the last couple of decades, to pay our respects to those who gave their lives to preserve our nation in the Great Civil War. Short speeches of remembrance were delivered, and flowers were laid at the graves of the fallen heroes. It is hoped that next year we won't be laying flowers at the graves of villagers who might fall in the current war.

Trans-Mississippi Exposition Opens

Thousands Head to Omaha
Indian Congress to Run Concurrently

The far-reaching success of the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 has inspired community leaders in Omaha, Nebraska, to hold their own version of that historic event—the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition. The Expo spreads across 184 acres at the northern edge of Omaha, near the Missouri River, from June 1 to October 31, 1898. The Grand Court at the heart of the Expo consists of majestic but temporary structures and statuary, lush gardens, and a canal with fountains and gondolas—all in stark contrast to the city of Omaha itself, which is still regarded by much of the nation as a frontier town. The Grand Court, also known as "The New White City" in reference to the classical architecture of the Chicago World's Fair, exhibits the products, industries, art, and design of Nebraska and adjoining states, and is Cont'd on page 2 Expo

Healthy Diet Cures All Ills

Michigan Doctor Advocates "Clean-living Diet"

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, is an American medical doctor, nutritionist, and health activist. He is the director of the Battle Creek Sanitarium in Battle Creek, Michigan. The sanitarium was founded by members of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. It has combined aspects of a European spa, a hydrotherapy institution, a hospital and a high-class hotel. Dr. Kellogg has treated both the rich and famous and the poor who could not afford other hospitals. Dr. Kellogg also helped to establish the American Medical Missionary College in 1895.

Dr. Kellogg has been a major leader in progressive health reform, particularly in the clean living movement. He has written extensively on science and health. His approach to "biologic living" has combined scientific knowledge with Adventist beliefs, promoting health reform, temperance and sexual abstinence. His promotion of developing anaphrodisic foods (foods that curb sexual urges) were based on these beliefs.

Dr. Kellogg was an early proponent of the new germ theory of disease, and is a strong advocate of relating intestinal flora and the presence of bacteria in the intestines to health and disease. The sanitarium approaches treatment in a holistic manner, actively

The Expo also includes a Midway of carnival rides and traveling attractions, and the Indian Congress, which will be attended by more than 500 members of 35 different Native American tribes. It is also hoped that near the end of the Exposition in October that President McKinley will make a visit and offer words of encouragement for this region of the country as it climbs out of the depths of the Panic of 1893.

promoting vegetarianism, nutrition, the use of enemas to clear intestinal flora, exercise, sun-bathing, hydrotherapy, and abstention from smoking tobacco, drinking alcoholic beverages and sexual activity. Those in the village that are interested in pursuing the advantages of clean living should contact Dr. Kellogg at his Sanatorium in Battle Creek, Michigan.

Pros and Cons of Child Labor

Should there be government regulation of child labor? This is a question that is being posed more and more as industry grows throughout the land. It is helpful for a family to be able to have the young people be able to earn their keep by working and contributing their wages to the family income. These young people are also helpful to the factories because their small size allows them to work where adults may not be able to fit between the machines. While this may be true it can also be pointed out that this work can be very dangerous and that these children can be maimed or even killed. Also while they are toiling in the factories the children are being deprived of the opportunity to attend school so that they can improve their lot in life through a good education. The industry bosses take advantage of the employment of children and pay them less than they would an adult. While this is good for the profits of the industry, it means that adults who have families to support cannot get a job. If they can, it is only at much reduced wages. Labor leaders such as Samuel Gompers, and his union the American Federation of Labor, have lately called for the end of child labor for those under the age of 14. How far should the government go to protect individuals at the expense of the entrepreneurs? Should the government interfere with the free enterprise system that has allowed America to grow and prosper?

A Villager's view:

I understand that with the rise of the women's suffrage movement and other such social pursuits there has been an unjust condemnation against the many businesses that employ child workers. I believe with much fervor and conviction that this condemnation is at its core inherently selfish and directly harmful to organized labor and to all those who work in any industry. By setting the precedent that a child must either stay home or pursue schooling we strip away the opportunity for said child to learn trade skills, develop responsibility, and other desirable traits. Along with such, by stripping children of the right to work we risk condemning many families to poverty as the child's contributions financially help keep said families afloat. We already have thousands of children who lack families that work in our many factories that rely on this income to survive. Are we to condemn them as well? Are we to force children and families onto the streets because we as a society now devalue the work of our labor force? This campaign is nothing more than a petty attempt at soapbox preaching one's own views without offering any meaningful alternatives to negate the damage such an action would cause. This is a gross overreaction to a nonexistent problem. This is why I, Florence Barrington, fully support this wonderful institution and the child's right to work.

Base Ball

A lively game of base ball will be contested on Saturday, June 8th on Muffin Field at the Ohio Village. Our local heroes the Muffins will be playing the Champion City Reapers. Unlike many of the professional teams that have emerged in the big cities, the Muffins are an amateur team. They still play by the old, civilized rules that emphasize the fun of the game and good sportsmanship. The professional attitude of winning at all costs will not be on display here. The starting time is 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Rest at ease, this is an event that is safe for the entire family to enjoy. A good time should be had by all. Come out and cheer the boys on.

The Myth of the "Lost Cause"

History records that the South lost the Civil War, and that the institution of slavery was abolished as a result of that conflict. Now though, a new "historical" interpretation is emerging. The myth of the so-called Lost Cause is rapidly gaining in popularity in the south as well as many northern sections of the country. They say that history is written by the victors, but the Civil War is becoming the rare exception. Perhaps the need for the country to stay together is making it necessary for the North to sit silently and accept the South's conception of the conflict. The Lost Cause emphasizes the supposed chivalric virtues of the antebellum South. It thus views the war as a struggle primarily waged to save the Southern way of life from Northern aggression. This would include slavery and the role the black workforce played in the economic and social life of the South. This notion is being used to perpetuate racism and racist power structures in the South. Lately we have seen a flurry of new legislation (known as Jim Crow laws) passed to basically restore the ante-bellum Southern way of life. The Daughters of the Confederacy are the ones who have really spearheaded this movement, even going so far as to sue local governments over teaching histories that depict the Confederacy as the aggressor in the war. Did the North really win the war? Slavery still exists. It now exists under the guise of new terms like segregation, share cropping, and tenant farming. The Slave Codes still exist in the form of the Jim Crow Laws. They provide the legal structure for this new system, but the enforcement is provided by extra-legal groups such as the Ku Klux Klan and the Knights of the White Camelia using tactics of intimidation and lynching.

Many a good men fought and died to preserve the Union and rid the nation of the evils of slavery during the Great Civil War. Are we now ready to concede defeat to the Southern way of life under the guise of fostering national unity?

A Carnegie Library for the Village?

Starting next year the Carnegie Foundation will expand its scope for building libraries. The first of Carnegie's public libraries was in his birthplace, Dunfermline, Scotland. It was first commissioned or granted by Carnegie and opened in 1883. The locally quarried sandstone building displays a stylized sun with a carved motto - "Let there be light" at the entrance.

The first library in the United States to be commissioned by Carnegie was in 1886 in his adopted hometown of Allegheny, Pennsylvania. In 1890, it became the second of his libraries to open in the USA. The building also contained the first Carnegie Music Hall in the World.

The first Carnegie library to open in the United States was in 1889 in Braddock, Pennsylvania, about 9 miles up the river from Pittsburgh, and home to one of the Carnegie Steel Company's mills. It was the second Carnegie Library in the United States to be commissioned, 1887, and was the first of just four libraries that he fully endowed. An 1893 addition doubled the size of the building and included the third Carnegie Music Hall in the United States.

Initially Carnegie limited his support to a few towns in which he had an interest. These would be in Scotland and the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania area. In America, 6 out of the first 7, 7 of the first 10, and 9 of the first 13 libraries he commissioned are all found in Southwestern Pennsylvania.

Until 1898, only one library was commissioned in America outside of Southwestern Pennsylvania—a library in Fairfield, Iowa, commissioned in 1892. Since this marked the first time that Carnegie had funded a library in which he had no personal ties, it helped initiate the funding model that would be used by Carnegie for additional libraries.

Beginning in 1899, his foundation will fund a dramatic increase in the number of libraries. This has coincided with the rise of women's clubs in the post-Civil War period, which have been most responsible for organizing efforts to establish libraries, including long-term fundraising and lobbying within their communities to support operations and collections. They have led to the establishment of 75-80 percent of the libraries in communities across the country. Carnegie believes in giving to the "industrious and ambitious; not those who need everything done for them, but those who, being most anxious and able to help themselves, deserve and will be benefited by help from others."

Since this would apply to many in the Ohio Village, procurement of funds for the expansion of our library should be easy. Miss Emma Thomas, as our village librarian, along with Mrs. LaLiberte, the President of the H & P, has been working diligently to secure the funds from the Carnegie foundation to expand our local library.
